RECAP OF THE SURVEY RESULTS

A summary of the Community Input Survey is provided below.

TOP THREE PRIORITIES FOR THE CITY OF RENO POLICE DEPARTMENT TO FOCUS ON:

Survey respondents were asked to rank what priorities they thought the Reno Police Department should focus on; the results indicated that “violent crime prevention” was the most critical priority. The second most selected priority was “crime solving/investigations,” and the third was “crime prevention.”

Results in order of most importance:

1. Violent crime prevention
2. Crime solving/investigations
3. Crime prevention
4. Fair and just policing
5. Response time reduction
6. Neighborhood quality of life
7. Enforcing lawful and orderly conduct
8. Community relations and engagement
9. Proactive youth engagement
10. Reducing racial disparities
11. Reducing police use of force

Survey respondents were provided an opportunity to identify other areas of priority. Common priorities identified included:

- Traffic enforcement is an area of concern for survey participants. Several respondents indicated that traffic violations should be enforced better and there is a real concern over unsafe speeding in the City.
- Respondents indicated that the Police Department should make officer visibility a priority. Survey participants indicated that officer visibility and engagement with the community would aid in promoting positive relationships with the community and would help citizens feel safer. Participants indicated that they rarely see patrol officers and that the Department should increase patrol officer staff and conduct more community outreach and develop community partnerships.
- Mental health program partnerships and training for officer response were also noted as areas of priority for the Department. Participants indicated that the Department would benefit from increased mental health awareness training and de-escalation training. Several participants indicated that the Department should partner with various mental health programs outside of the Department to go on those calls for service that are non-violent.
- Survey participants are concerned that there is a lack of staffing in the Department to fully investigate non-violent crimes related to traffic violations, vandalism, and the homeless population. Participants indicated that an area of priority should be increasing staff to deal with smaller crimes and enforcing laws regarding vagrancy.
- Several participants indicated that a priority of the Department should be to remain apolitical. Participants are concerned that the Department is or could become political and this could impact law enforcement.

- Participants indicated the Department should focus on treating all groups within the community equally and should enforce all laws equally. Participants would like the Department to engage in conversations about race and diversity and make diversity training a priority.

WHAT, IF ANYTHING, WOULD YOU LIKE TO CHANGE IN HOW THE POLICE DEPARTMENT INTERACTS WITH YOUR COMMUNITY?

While several participants indicated that there are no necessary changes to the way the Department interacts with the community, many respondents outline areas they believed the Department could change. The main area of change related to officer visibility and community engagement/interaction. Participants indicated that if officers interacted with the community in more positive ways, including through youth interaction, the feeling of trust in the Department would improve. Survey participants indicated that officers could improve the way they interact with the community by appearing kinder, more empathetic, and more communicative.

Participants indicated areas the Department could improve in that would aid in the community's perception of the Department, ranging from improving diversity and diversity training, focusing on de-escalation techniques and mental health partnerships, better serving underserved communities, and enforcing laws related to vagrancy. Survey respondents would like the Department to better enforce laws related to vagrancy, drugs, and smaller crimes.

Several participants indicated that they feel unheard by the Department and feel the Department doesn't follow through with investigations. Participants would like the Department to change how they deal with investigations and, as one participant wrote, "be seen as a trusted partner". The Department should be aware of problems in the community, including socially, and offer transparency related to the Department through an active relationship with the community. Participants would like the Department to engage more in diversity training and racial bias reduction as well.

WHAT, IF ANYTHING, WOULD YOU LIKE TO SEE THE CITY AND POLICE DEPARTMENT DO DIFFERENTLY TO HELP YOU FEEL SAFE

The trends found in the community responses were similar to the previous question in that a large majority of respondents wanted an increased value placed on positive community relationships and partnerships with local agencies. The majority of the participants that responded "other" indicated in their comments that they did not have enough data from other cities to determine a comparison.

WHAT ARE YOU MOST PROUD OF AS A MEMBER OF THE RENO POLICE DEPARTMENT?

Respondents were asked an open-ended question to provide feedback on what makes them most proud as a member of the Department. Responses ranged from the professionalism of others in the Department to their role in helping the community. The most common response from those who participated in the survey indicated that they were most proud of the relationships built with members in the Department and with the community. The sense of comradery and satisfaction in the Department's work is a significant source of pride for survey participants. Several respondents indicated that the Department is facing challenging times and staff and officers are doing their best to meet these challenges. Members of the Department indicated that the job is challenging but there is a willingness from everyone to serve others within the Department and the community.

Several participants detailed areas of concern in their comments; indicating that there are mixed feelings within the Department regarding the activities of the Department and their own experiences. While many were positive about their experiences, several indicated that they were experiencing burnout. Many respondents indicated that they feel the Department is stretched too thin with too few resources at their disposal. There is a sense that officers and civilian staff do their best with what they've perceived as poor leadership and a lack of resources, as well as a lack of respect from the community and City leadership.

EQUIPMENT AND TRAINING QUALITY

Participants were asked to provide input on the level of training and quality of the equipment provided.

Level of Training:

When given the opportunity to provide additional comments, respondents indicated that training is an area of concern for those within the Department. Several sworn members of the Department indicated that training often doesn't go beyond minimum standards and they have to seek outside training on their own time and cost which is often denied. Members of the civilian staff indicated that there are seldom opportunities for training.

Quality of Equipment:

Regarding equipment, participants indicated that they felt the equipment is adequate but it's difficult to obtain updated equipment unless the existing equipment breaks. Respondents indicated that equipment is outdated and/or takes too long to approve (i.e. load bearing vests). Civilian staff described feeling that they are often the last to receive new equipment. Areas of equipment concern mostly related to technology including printers for citations, computers, and related tech that are outdated and slow.

TOP PRIORITIES OF THE RENO POLICE DEPARTMENT AND AREAS OF IMPROVEMENT

The top selection among respondents was that “responding to emergency calls for service” should be the Department's highest priority. Following responding to emergency calls for service, respondents felt that “crime prevention & reduction” was the second-highest priority; the third-highest priority was “maintaining public order.” The option with the least responses was “use of force training.”

Use of force training	18.75%	24
Total Respondents: 128

Suggestions for improvement and comments related to Department priorities include:

- Focusing on Department morale; improving support of and showing appreciation to sworn and non-sworn employees. The Department should prioritize improving the quality of life for all staff as several members of the Department indicated they were overworked or felt unsupported by command staff.
- Staffing levels are too low. Many participants feel that divisions do not work well together or are not adequately staffed to succeed.
- The Department should focus on communication, transparency, and accountability throughout all divisions. Participants indicated that leadership is lacking and without accountability. The next Chief and command staff should do more to engage with officers and civilian staff.
- Participants indicated that there should be communication from the top down clarifying what the established priorities of the Department are.
- The Department should focus on engaging with all members of the Department and prioritize the community through engagement and service.
- Several participants indicated that the Department should eliminate what some perceive as a focus on politics and social agendas.

Survey respondents were asked to select their top five priorities from a list of provided priorities for the next Chief of Police.

The results are as follows (in order of most selected):

Survey participants indicated that the next Chief should restructure divisions as many felt the current model was stale and stretched too thin due to what some see as a lack of adequate staffing levels. The next Chief should prioritize building and maintaining relationships with existing staff while recruiting more. Leadership, accountability, and communication were all areas that were noted as areas of priority for the next Chief of RPD. Survey participants noted that the next Chief should think outside of the box and be unafraid to make changes while communicating changes and dialoguing with the entire Department.

DO YOU HAVE ANY OTHER COMMENTS OR SUGGESTIONS REGARDING THE NEXT CHIEF OF POLICE? IS THERE ANYTHING ELSE YOU CAN THINK OF THAT THE CITY SHOULD CONSIDER WHEN SELECTING THE NEXT CHIEF OF POLICE?

Following the initial portion of the survey, participants were given the opportunity to offer any additional comments that they may have related to the recruitment efforts of the Chief of Police or the Department as a whole. A majority of participants would like the City to select the next Chief from outside of the Department, indicating a lack of trust in the existing command staff. Several participants noted that the Department has stalled forward progress and a new Chief from outside of the agency could bring in fresh ideas and act as an independent auditor of the Department's current practices. The next Chief will need to focus heavily on morale, hiring and retention, and visibility within the Department and public.

When selecting the new Chief, participants would like the City to consider a strong leader, someone that can move the Department forward and remain above politics. Several participants indicated the next Chief should be a leader with the strength to make unpopular decisions and remain calm under pressure. The next Chief needs to be an individual that is more than a supervisor and is a leader in the Department and community.
